The lack of knowledge in research writing. The state bar council has taken steps to compulsory research publications every year for at least one student. If the publication is compulsory for undergraduates in law courses the students can easily understand and prepare their postgraduate law courses. Why because most law college student do not know how to write articles at their postgraduate level. Because the students gain the knowledge of searching and they develop their skills.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

The state bar council facilitates the legal programs in their college for learning the legal professions. Organizing professional development for legal education like seminars, workshops, and conferences.

TECHNOLOGY INTEGRATION

State universities must have online resources in their library sources. Nowadays court proceedings are also in the digital platform like e-filling. Some of the private law colleges have their online resources and students can easily access them. However, most of the government law colleges do not have online resources for their study purpose. So, with this type of law college students suffer.

CLINICAL LEGAL DEVELOPMENT

In some of the South Indian law colleges do not have a socio-legal clinic. If the clinic it's there on the college's campus the students can solve their college student's problems and, in that way, they students get their practical knowledge from their undergraduates.

SET THE CURRICULUM GUIDELINES

The state bar council must set the guidelines for legal education. the curriculum rules are not followed by the law institutions. For example, attendance issues. If one of them studied in one institution the person is detained from the same institution for the reason of attendance.

That same person joined other institutions directly when the person was detained the year. If the state bar councils strictly put the guidelines of the legal aid camp in rural areas etc.

LACK OF PRACTICAL TRAINING

In most of the law institutions do not follow the rules of compulsory internship programs. Some of the law colleges don't know about the compulsory internship program.

CASE LAW

Sudheer vs Bar Council of India, AIR 1999, SC1167<sup>10</sup>

The writ petitioners had completed their legal education and had obtained law degrees from their universities. They contended that their right to practice law is being arbitrarily denied by the impugned rules framed by the Bar Council of India and their fundamental right under Article 19(1) (g) of the Constitution of India is being violated.

The Bar Council of India Training Rules of 1995 provided, inter alia, that no person shall be entitled to be enrolled as an advocate unless he is eligible to be enrolled as such under section 24 of the Advocates Act, 1961<sup>11</sup>. and it has undergone training as prescribed under these rules. The successful completion of the training period required the candidate to regularly attend the chamber or office of the guide, study case papers, correspondence, draft pleadings, attend courts, and particularly study cases to get acquainted with the practice in courts and minimum attendance for 225 days in all in courts and chambers in a year. The civil appearing arises in Goa, Bombay, and Maharashtra in three courts. This case was an attempt made by the apex court to address the contentious issues of the All-India Bar Examinations for the enrollment of the advocates. It is concluded that the Bar Council of India has the power to regulate the rules related to the enrollment of advocates since it is the apex body of lawyers in India. In addition, it is concluded that the training rules of 1995 weren't violating articles 14 and 19(1) (g) of the Indian Constitution. A right to practice law isn't an absolute and unconditional right. It provides the right to carry out a profession of one's choice since a proper training period enhances the quality of the work.

SUGGESTION

- 1. The state bar council forms one committee to monitor whether the law institutions follow the rules.
- 2. The state bar council must inspect the law institutions every year.
- 3. Legal education must be promoting granting aid to law colleges to promote legal aid programs in rural areas.
- 4. The state bar council must be taken steps to improve the future legal education for the welfare of the students.

CONCLUSION

The State Bar Council of India has to perform more in the field of legal education in the state. the state bar council has to create rules for legal education. The state bar council will improve the quality and standards of legal education needed to be in law institutions. The state bar council is one of the tools for maintaining the quality of legal education and promoting legal education within their jurisdiction.
